1. Warm Up

Warm-ups prevent injuries and help you play better. Start with a two-minute walk, then pick up speed for three more minutes. Slow down gradually. Take two minutes to do some slow stretches. Show your walk and stretch routine to someone else.

2. Play Ball!

Play a field sport at least six different times. What do you like about playing the sport? What do you dislike? How have you improved? What is your goal for getting better?

3. Pump It Up!

Music can make you feel pumped up and psyched for the game. Plan and make a tape with at least four songs that you think would prepare a team for a big game. Play it for your Girl Scout team, family, or friends.

4. Scores and Stats

Choose a field sport that interests you. Learn how to keep score. What other statistics are important in the game? Attend a local match or game and watch the scorekeeper at work. Keep your own score for the game. Did you and the scorekeeper agree? No one playing this sport where you live? Watch a match on TV.

5. Feet and Cleats

Why do certain field sports require special shoes? Look at the footwear for three different field sports. What is the special feature of each? How do shoes for one game differ from shoes for the other two games? Not sure where to start? Visit a sporting goods store, look through catalogs, or go online to sites that sell shoes.

6. The Right Stuff

Choose a field sport and learn about the equipment needed to play. With a friend, list all the equipment that's needed. Then pick three of the pieces and find out:

- Why are they made the way they are?
- How do they work?
- How do you maintain them?

You can find out by talking to your gym teacher or someone from your town's Parks and Recreation Department, visiting a sporting goods store, looking through catalogs, or by going online.

7. Drink Plenty of Liquids

The recommended daily amount of water a person should drink is six to eight cups.* While there are many liquids, water is the best for you and usually, the least expensive (especially if you get it from the tap). Try to drink six to eight cups of water a day, every day for three days. Did you do it? What helped/got in the way of reaching your goal?

8. Work It, Girl!

Find one woman with a sports career and interview her about her work. What does she like about her job? What training did she have to get? What advice does she have for young girls interested in that career? Don't have anyone local? Watch interviews of women in that field on TV, read about them in magazines, or go online. The "Just for Girls" Web site can be a good place to start.

9. Team Up to Win!

There are many different types of people and personalities on a team. Think about your favorite team or a team you play on. What are three things that help make that team a success? For one week, work on one quality that will make you a better team player.

10. Be a Fan

Choose a female athlete in a field sport you admire. Why do you admire her? Is she a good role model for girls? Design a sports trading card for your athlete.
